++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly dry and rather cloudy. Some sunshine breaking through.

Today:
Most places will have a dry day and it will be fairly cloudy, the clouds thick enough for patchy drizzle in east at first. Some sunshine breaking through, most likely near west coast, north Highlands and this afternoon over Moray.

Tonight:
It will stay mostly dry and fairly cloudy but some clear periods will develop overnight. Southerly winds will freshen along the West Coast by morning.

Sunday:
Mostly dry morning with some warm sunshine. Becoming cloudy during the afternoon with rain, heavier on the west coast extending eastwards and becoming lighter, reaching east coast during evening.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
A mostly dry few days with bright spells developing on Monday. Warm sunshine will extend northwards across Scotland on Tuesday, possibly very warm on Wednesday.
